" Paris, 30 Aug., 1858. The Special Commandent at Tahiti has renewed the proposition so many times already rejected, to subject the Leeward Islands to the authority of the Protectorate.

"The joint declaration of the English and French Governments of the 19th June, 1847, has recognized in the most positive manner the independence of the islands Huahine, Raiatea, Borabora, and the small adjoining islands which belong to the above.

" In June, 1856, the Minister of Foreign Affairs considered it inappropriate to raise the question of the abrogation of that treaty which had placed these islands outside of the Protectorate.

.. The same reasons exist to-day for adjourning the propositions of Count Pouget.

"There can not be a question to extend our Protectorate over islands not included in the Convention of the 19th June, 1847."

China.

The North China Herald of Dec. 11 says :

"We are still without authentic intelligence re- to be seen. specting the progress of Lord Elgin's Expedition up the Yangtsze kiang. The Chinese report that they were no further than Ganking, or about one third of the distance from Woosung to Hankow, on their way up the river, on the 24th Nov. They also say that 70 rebels were killed in the little affair, before mentioned, when they had the temerity among the people, and there is a premium again, to fire upon the ships near Woohoo."

The commercial regulations that have been agreed upon, supplementary to the Treaty of Tien-tsin, we republish for the general information of our mercantile community :-

The Peruvian money has all been exported, and Bolivian money has entirely taken its place, and has passed for a value far above its real worth. This has been countenanced by the Peruvian Government. Good Manners in Politics. Congress has met, the President's Message has been delivered, the smouldering fire brands of political discussion, kindled anew, have been thrown after the recess, upon the efforts of orators and editors. There are already symptoms of fresh fury in the types, new cases of bronchitis in the speakers, and a general Vesavian eruption of fiery adjectives in the controversies of the day.

Everybody feels the habit of detraction to be a nuisance. Is there no remedy for it? Shall we always hear the barking of the coarse Codrus? If he stopped to reflect, perhaps Codrus himself would cease to bark. Why should a license be allowed in print or in a public oration which could not be justified in any other mode of proceeding? he would be kicked to the door and excluded from the premises. Tameness and mean subserviency are to be avoided as sedulously as vulgarity and insult. But withal there is a proper decorum of proceeding in censure, which if it be transgressed, opposition loses all its strength. We would have the press, at times, more severe than it is, when we perceive its influence diminished by its empty fury.

To say the truth, the unhandsome manner of proceeding of many of our journals, with reference to public men and measures, would seem to result rather from weakness of understanding than badv.
